

Have you reported serious issues with your home including damp or mould since October 2025?

Register your interest to take part in important research

Since October 2025, new rules in England mean social landlords must act quickly when problems in your home could affect your health. This includes serious issues like damp and mould. Landlords now have strict timeframes for checking these problems and putting things right.

Verian, an independent social research company, is working with the UK Government to understand tenants' experiences during the first few months of these new rules, known as Awaab's Law.

If you have reported any serious issues with your home, including damp or mould to your landlord after 27th October 2025, we want to hear from you.
